

Governor Newsom's California Jobs First initiative created 61,000 jobs

[Article originally appeared in <https://business.ca.gov>]

Governor Newsom continued his California Jobs First tour in Orange County, highlighting the nearly $1.6 billion in investments from 2025 that went to train more than 142,000 workers and help create more than 61,000 new jobs across California's 13 economic regions. This first-of-its-kind initiative is accelerating economic momentum across the state by empowering regional strategies, investing in high-growth sectors and expanding access to good-paying jobs.

These historic investments were announced alongside the celebration of Orange County's Jobs First regional plan — which will help advance life science, high-tech, advanced and precision manufacturing, and travel and tourism in the region.

"California is proving once again that when we invest in people and innovation, we build an economy that works for everyone. Jobs First is driving historic progress in every region of the state by backing regional priorities, doubling down on key industries, and creating opportunities for Californians where they live and work."

These plans were built from the ground up by local partners, for their communities. From tribal nations and rural regions to major economic hubs, California is leading the nation with economic development shaped by the people it's meant to serve."

— Governor Gavin Newsom

California Jobs First: Bold vision, realized locally

In 2021, Governor Newsom launched a statewide economic development planning process which became California Jobs First in 2023. The objective was to create good-paying, accessible jobs and sustainable economic growth across the state's 13 regions, with each region launching a planning body — or collaborative — with representation from a wide variety of community partners, including labor, business, local government, education, environmental justice, community organizations, and more. The collaboratives then wrote their own data-driven, community-led economic plans, including identifying strategic industry sectors.

Launched in early 2025, the California Jobs First Economic Blueprint laid out a statewide economic vision anchored in ten strategic industry sectors and informed by those 13 region-specific plans. Since then, funding has flowed into communities across California, growing the economy and creating job opportunities up and down the state.

Notable state investments and activities from the past year include:

Regional Investment Initiative:

- Implementation Phase: In August 2025 $80 million was awarded to 11 projects spanning 7 regions as part of the Regional Investment Initiative's first phase of implementation funding. Funding was awarded to four project clusters, focused on sectors including aerospace and defense, life sciences, agtech and farm equipment.
- Tribal Phase: In June 2025, the state awarded $15 million to 14 California Native American tribes to support economic devel-

Historian Carter G. Woodson launched Black History Week in 1926 to recognize the significant contributions of African Americans during the second week of February to coincide with the birthdays of Abraham Lincoln (February 12) and abolitionist/writer Frederick Douglass (February 14). Congress expanded it to National Black History Month 50 years later during the nation's bicentennial celebration at which time then-President Gerald Ford urged the country to "seize the opportunity to honor the too-often neglected accomplishments of Black Americans in every area of endeavor throughout our history."

The following facts are possible thanks to the invaluable responses to U.S. Census Bureau surveys. We appreciate the public's cooperation as we measure America's people and economy.

WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

Building Better Begins With Workforce, Culture and Community

[Article originally appeared in
<https://constructionexec.com>]

By Lynda Hauke

How philanthropic initiatives, professional development and wellbeing boost workforce culture.

In 2026, workers strive to find a profession that adds value and supports their greater community while also feeling ample support from within their organizations. While construction firms are continuously building structures that strengthen communities, are they also building their workforce? And what can they do to build more?

The unique, yet simple mission of “building better communities” helps develop a workforce that feels supported within to give back even stronger to the communities around them.

Building a Dedicated Workforce From Within

No matter your role, every worker should feel supported in their career growth. However, different job titles require different training. Junior-level staff should be exposed to several elements of the career industry, which can be done through programs like career rotation. This initiative provides exposure to anyone, from recent graduates and those with limited knowledge of the construction industry, to three facets: estimating, field operations and project management. Companies like C.W. Driver are implementing this technique, where their staff learn about each area of the course for six months and then move on to the next rotation. Providing this exposure early in a career can help junior staff develop a toolkit that enables them to solve problems across various domains while also learning where their true passions lie.

Middle-level staff at C.W. Driver are placed within a LEAD program, which sets them up for expanded leadership roles. The 18-month initiative brings participants into quarterly sessions where they gain access to strategic direction, operations and business functions. Employees utilize self-awareness tools, including 360-degree feedback, and are subsequently introduced to business function models, connecting with top-level executives and challenging participants to develop initiatives that evolve beyond existing processes. This exposure not only supports development in the construction industry but also prepares them for any business challenge they may face.

C.W. Driver also hosts “Driver University” programs, in which all employees can participate, that provide exposure to in-house classes covering all aspects of the construction industry. Courses include scheduling, cost management, green/sustainable building practices, safety, leadership skills and more. Having these options helps employees find their niche while also becoming more versatile.

Equipping employees with robust, yet flexible programs makes them feel like they are taking charge of their career while understanding that their employer is committed to their career advancement.

A People-First Approach

On average, at least a third of human life is spent working. Why should it be strenuous? Putting people’s needs at the center of your work will increase productivity while also letting employees know that their needs are valued and respected.

Part of the people-first approach is ensuring leadership is accessible to all employees. C.W. Driver President Karl Kreutziger supports the day-to-day activities of projects and is easily accessible to address any pressing needs.

Additionally, wellness is at the heart of “better” work. Alongside professional development courses, wellness content and wellness seminars are valuable tools for your workforce, as learning how to take care of yourself is as valuable as knowing how to do the job right. Employee Assistance Program also provide help by offering free counseling sessions and breaking barriers between the cost of mental health services.

Within busy work seasons, wellness is often forgotten or forgone. To remind employees that optimal health is crucial, get them involved with walking challenges and step competitions for individuals and teams, ensuring they take care of themselves while having fun. Offering flexible schedules is also crucial to an employee’s overall wellbeing, both mentally and physically, and allows employees to prioritize their family needs and the company to have broader access to talent.

The core of a “better” culture is people. What people desire most is to feel included and valued at work. When inclusion is carried through all aspects of work, that desire is fulfilled. Wider inclusion can be explored through non-traditional recruiting pipelines like campus and military hiring, informal and formal development opportunities for leadership growth, building employee-belonging groups for women and minorities, and partnering with organizations.

Giving Back

Giving Back is the foundation of “building better communities.” As more construction work focuses on building innovative spaces, ensuring those spaces are meaningful becomes more imperative, but giving back goes beyond the project at hand. Creating a work environment that extends beyond work not only boosts productivity but is essential to creating a workforce that is healthy, informed and compassionate.

Explore other C.W. Driver programs, like their REACH program, here. C.W. Driver Cos. employees are given paid volunteer hours and opportunities to donate to support charities. Thus far, C.W. Driver Cos. has supported 53+ charities and donated $545,000. Notable charities C.W. Driver Cos. works with throughout Southern California include Habitat for Humanity San Diego | San Gabriel Valley, HomeAid Orange County | Los Angeles, Jessie Rees Foundation, HillSides, Shelter to Soldier, City of Hope and more. These charities are spread across Los Angeles, Orange County, San Diego, and the Inland Empire —showcasing that all communities across Southern California are important.

opment initiatives, job training programs, environmental stewardship projects, business growth and research and development.

- Wildfire Relief: In February 2025, $3 million was awarded to the LA Jobs First Collaborative to support the region in recovering from the wildfires that impacted the Altadena and Pacific Palisades communities. This funding is supporting a campaign to promote the local tourism industry and small businesses community, as well as quarterly comprehensive economic impact reporting and analysis.

California Competes Tax Credit: Over the course of 2025, California awarded tax credits to 21 companies choosing to expand or relocate in the state, spurring $2.56 billion in capital investment and creating 4,591 new jobs.

California Film & Television Tax Credit: In 2025, tax credits were awarded to 155 film and television projects, which are collectively expected to generate nearly $5 billion in economic activity and 33,391 cast and crew jobs across 6,292 filming days.

Employment Training Panel: In 2025, the panel invested over $82 million through 299 contracts with California businesses to support the training of 70,544 workers.

Apprenticeships: The Department of Industrial Relations (DIR) and its Division of Apprenticeship Standards (DAS) awarded over $91 million in 2025 to expand apprenticeship opportunities, benefiting more than 69,000 apprentices and pre-apprentices.

High Road Training Partnerships (H RTP): The 2025 H RTP investment of $18.5 million aims to increase access to existing High Road jobs for underserved populations and create pathways for incumbent workers seeking job growth with High Road employers. These projects will train over 3,100 workers and are tailored to focus on one or more of the strategic sectors in their region(s) as identified in the Jobs First Blueprint.

California State Trade Expansion Program (STEP): Throughout the 2025 federal fiscal year, STEP grants supported 204 California small businesses, resulting in a reported $33 million in export sales and the creation or retention of 254 jobs. These export activities took place on every continent except Antarctica, highlighting the global reach of California's small business community.

"Bet" Sector Investments: California is doubling down on its emerging "bet" sectors, including fusion and quantum. In November 2025, the state launched Quantum California, a new statewide initiative uniting government, academia and industry to accelerate quantum innovation, grow jobs and secure California's leadership in this critical field. November also saw the first major gathering of the state's fusion ecosystem at the 2025 California Fusion Energy Convening, signaling significant momentum in another frontier technology sector.

"This year showed what California can accomplish when state agencies, regional collaboratives and local partners rally around shared priorities," said GO-Biz Director Dee Dee Myers. "Jobs First is aligning sector investments and business development in ways that create measurable, lasting impact for communities up and down the state. The progress made in 2025 is only the beginning, and we look forward to supporting the next wave of high-impact projects across all thirteen regions."

"Through California Jobs First, we're strengthening the pathways that connect people to stable careers in growing industries. In 2025, we expanded training, apprenticeship, and regional partnerships across California," said Stewart Knox, Secretary of the Labor & Workforce Development Agency. "This year, we're scaling that work so more Californians can access clear routes into good-paying jobs."

All these key investments from 2025 build on more than $286 million in prior years' funding through the Regional Investment Initiative.

Advancing state-of-the-art sectors in Orange County

Today's event, hosted at Medtronic, celebrated the implementation of Orange County's Jobs First regional plan, which identified life science, high-tech, advanced and precision manufacturing and travel and tourism as priority sectors for their region.

The medical device technology (medtech) industry is a critical sector for the continued success and growth of Orange County's regional economy, employing more than 21,000 workers. Across the state, there are more than 13,600 medtech companies, accounting for more than 30% of the medical device industry revenue across the United States.

Fostering Regional Engagement and Collaboration

Throughout 2025, the California Jobs First Council, including nine Cabinet-level agency principals collaborating to promote economic development, met with leaders in four of the 13 regions — Redwood Coast, Bay Area, Capitol and Southern Border — to hear directly from regions about their economic priorities, Tribal economic development needs and emerging opportunities across communities.

And as part of the Regional Investment Initiative award process, the Council also hosted an Investment Summit in San Francisco in June that saw 35 project leads pitch bold ideas to private philanthropy and funders, sparking funding for the innovations shaping the next wave of California's economy.

Strengthening Workforce Alignment

2025 marked a major milestone in workforce development with the release of the Master Plan for Career Education by the Labor and Workforce Development Agency. Designed to complement the Jobs First initiative, the Master Plan aligns education, training and career pathways with the jobs envisioned in each region, ensuring California's workforce is prepared to meet the needs of fast-growing industries. The Plan aims to expand access to good-paying careers by serving 500,000 apprentices by 2029.

Accelerating building and development

Governor Newsom signed groundbreaking legislation in 2025 to cut red tape and streamline construction, building on the past six years of work with the legislature. Namely, AB 130 and SB 131 that provide regulatory relief for many critical housing and economic development projects, including for advanced manufacturing, from CEQA.

In addition, the Governor's Office of Land Use and Climate Innovation launched a process to update the state level General Plan Guidelines, including updated guidance for economic development elements.

On top of that, the recently launched Business Ready Sites Program features an interactive web-mapping tool showcasing fully zoned and entitled sites suitable for headquarters, research & development and industrial manufacturing facilities.

Looking ahead

The California Jobs First initiative will continue driving impact this upcoming summer with $45 million in implementation funding through the Regional Investment Initiative, which will help regions expand access to job training and business development. The Jobs First team will also host a second investment summit planned for April 2026, where regions will pitch their highest-impact projects to attract additional private and philanthropic funding.

California's economic dominance

California remains the fourth-largest economy in the world. With an increasing state population and recent record-high tourism spending, California is the nation's top state for new business starts, access to venture capital funding, and manufacturing, high-tech, and agriculture.

SUCCESS STORIES

The Board Babes

[Article originally appeared in <https://calosba.ca.gov>]

Adam and Lindsey Mateo are siblings with a love for charcuterie. While both work full-time in the medical field, they decided to combine their skills and passion to create something special: The Board Babes, a mobile charcuterie bar serving delicious, fully customizable personalized charcuterie spreads at events and parties across Placer, El Dorado, and Sacramento counties.

With years of experience in restaurant management, bartending, and entrepreneurship, plus some basic equipment already in hand, the siblings felt ready to launch their mobile food business. But they quickly realized there was much more to consider than they initially thought. What licenses would they need for a mobile charcuterie operation? How should they approach marketing to reach their target audience? And how much capital would be required to successfully launch in time for the busy summer event season?

The questions were piling up faster than the goodies on their signature boards. Adam and Lindsey needed guidance to navigate the complexities of launching a mobile food business and ensure they were setting themselves up for success from day one.

That's when they connected with the Sierra SBDC. Working closely with advisor Sandra Beaton, the siblings began transforming their charcuterie passion into a fully operational business. The SBDC helped them understand the ins and outs of setting up a mobile food operation, from licensing and permitting requirements to accessing the operating capital needed for launch.

"It has been a pleasure working with Sandra throughout this process," Adam and Lindsey shared. "She helped guide us from start to finish and made sure to always keep us on track by setting goals between meetings. Her broad knowledge and positive attitude always kept us moving in the right direction, even when things were getting tedious and a bit overwhelming at times. This program has been invaluable for our small business and we appreciate all of the assistance we have received."

Together with their SBDC advisor, The Board Babes secured sellers permits, food handlers permits, and incorporated as an LLC. They formalized a comprehensive business plan that outlined the investment required from the pair, helping them make smart decisions about start-up and operating expenses. After investing their own capital into the business, Adam and Lindsey worked with the SBDC on formulating, funding, and executing a targeted marketing plan designed to reach their ideal customers.

The results? In just a few short months, The Board Babes, LLC secured all necessary licenses, strategically invested capital into their operations, created a comprehensive marketing plan and event schedule, and landed their dream launch events. Today, their business is thriving during the busy summer season, appearing at breweries and farmers markets across Placer County and available for hire at private parties and events of all types.

What started as a shared passion between siblings has become a booming mobile catering business, bringing artfully crafted charcuterie experiences to communities throughout Northern California. Kona Ice of Marin Kona Ice of Marin is a mobile shaved ice franchise serving Marin County, from the Golden Gate Bridge to San Rafael. What began as a single truck last year has grown into a two-truck operation serving schools, community organizations, and local events. The business follows an innovative give-back model where 20% of total sales from events are returned to the hosting school or organization, creating a win-win that supports local education while building customer loyalty.

Husband-and-wife team Derry and Dori Gutierrez run the business together. Dori handles logistics, scheduling, and communication, while Derry operates the trucks and builds relationships throughout the community. Their expansion includes partnerships with organizations like Dominican University and HeadsUp, plus private events and community festivals including the Mill Valley Film Festival, May Madness, and San Rafael Porchfest.

Derry grew up inspired by his stepfather's entrepreneurial spirit, helping him sell souvenir shirts at parades, festivals, and sports events. This experience taught him customer relations and the importance of starting a business with a strong foundation. Derry's love for children led him to earn a degree in psychology and work as a preschool teacher. While his career thrived, the idea of entrepreneurship remained on his mind.

Derry was drawn to Kona Ice's business model because it combined his entrepreneurial aspirations with his passion for working with children and building community connections. He envisioned more than just selling shaved ice. He wanted to create a space where every child feels seen, heard, and joyful.

But as first-time business owners transitioning from education to entrepreneurship, Derry and Dori faced significant challenges. They had limited knowledge of business operations and financing, and were unsure how to evaluate the franchise's financing options or navigate the loan process.

That's when they connected with the Marin SBDC. Their advisor provided comprehensive guidance in understanding and securing the initial financing needed to purchase the Kona

Ice truck. He researched the various loan alternatives presented by the franchise and helped Derry determine which option made the most financial sense.

"Running a business was a whole new world for me. I didn't know where to start," Derry shared. "While we had support from the franchise, we still needed help navigating our options and securing funding for the Kona Ice truck. Our SBDC Advisor broke everything down in a way that was easy to understand and helped us compare loan options. What stood out most was the time he spent researching on our behalf to find the best fit, and the fact that all of this support was completely free!"

The advisor's hands-on approach helped them through the loan process, providing straightforward explanations for complex business concepts and ongoing availability during the launch.

"He made himself available to answer every question and helped me feel confident moving forward," Derry noted. "Honestly, we might not be where we are today without that guidance. I had no idea such helpful, free resources existed for new business owners. It gave us the confidence and knowledge we needed to get the loan and launch Kona Ice of Marin."
