Building Smarter, Faster: High-Speed Rail Authority to Advance Bold Vision with Private Sector

[Article originally appeared in https://hsr.ca.gov]

Interest from the private sector in investing in California's High Speed-Rail project is strong – and continuing to grow.

In January, the Authority hosted an industry forum that brought together more than 400 experts from around the world to discuss strategies to build the system smarter and faster. This outreach opened the door for meaningful private sector engagement, including interest from private equity firms exploring new financing opportunities. It marked the first instance of such large-scale industry collaboration, and the Authority has continued to build on that momentum – gathering ongoing insights on how to shape future partnerships with private industry through sustained engagement.

Governor Gavin Newsom is proposing a guaranteed minimum of $1 billion per year of Capand-Trade proceeds through 2045. A guaranteed minimum funding level will improve project planning and delivery and create options for project delivery, including potentially making the project more attractive to private capital. This will resolve the number one risk for completion of Merced to Bakersfield – funding uncertainty – and will address the funding gap previously identified by the Authority's Office of the Inspector General. This will help acceler-

Asian Americans in STEM: Perceptions vs. Realities

[Article originally appeared in https://alltogether.swe.org]

Perception is powerful and can be harmful when it is incorrect.

In the United States, Asian Americans are often labeled the "model minority," a myth that characterizes their perceived collective success. This concept has been used divisively since the end of WWII to minimize the role of racism in the struggles of Black Americans and other minority groups. Despite a rich history of contribution as vital builders of the U.S., including the thousands of Chinese workers who constructed the transcontinental railroads in the 1860s and the segregated Japanese American 442nd Regimental Combat Team whose bravery distinguished them as the most decorated in the history of the U.S. military, Asian Americans are still perceived as not-from-here, the "perpetual foreigners." At a population of 24 million with ancestral roots from at least 20 countries, Asian Americans are PRSRT STD U.S. Postage PAID San Fran CA 941 Permit No. 820 also far from the common monolith depiction, representing both the most economically affluent and the most impoverished. Asian Americans are increasingly significant drivers to the country's economy as consumers and job creators, staving off labor shortages in not just technology and professional arenas, but also in food services, health care, agriculture, and the arts.

The misperceptions associated with Asian Americans create harmful stereotypes that make the diverse experiences of this community invisible, present barriers to opportunities, and mask the need for actions to unlock this group's potential. Though well-represented on college campuses and at the entry level, Asian Americans face the longest odds of advancement in the workplace as the least likely group to be promoted to management. Asian American women face the double challenges of gender and racial biases.

Our collective challenge is to learn more about this incredibly diverse group of Americans, who are the nation's fastest-growing demographic, and find ways to address the different disparities faced by the community. What a win for everyone when this potential is unleashed!

Asian Americans in the Workplace

Let us look at the high-level data that feeds this stereotype. An April 2021 Pew Research report shows that 54% of Asian Americans ages 25 and older hold at least a bachelor's degree, well above the U.S. average of 33%. At 7% of the U.S. population, Asian Americans account for 11% of undergraduate and graduate STEM degrees, while also comprising 13% of the STEM workforce. In aggregate, Asian men working in STEM are more highly paid (127%) than their counterparts who are white (100%), Hispanic (83%), and Black (78%). The gender pay gap among STEM workers holds true for Asian women, who are compensated $0.86 for each dollar Asian men are paid.

On the surface, Asian Americans in STEM seem to face few challenges in the workplace. However, these top-line data points do not tell the whole story.

CALIFORNIA ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

California awards $52.4 million to reinvest in communities, increase economic opportunity across the state

[Article originally appeared in https://business.ca.gov]

The Governor's Office of Business and Economic Development (GO-Biz) awarded $52.4 million to 33 organizations through the California Community Reinvestment Grants (CalCRG) program, which serves communities disproportionately affected by past federal and state drug policies.

The funds come from the cannabis tax revenue generated by The Adult Use of Marijuana Act

(Proposition 64, 2016) and aid qualified community-based organizations and local health departments in a range of activities, including:

- Job placement
- Mental health treatment
- Substance use disorder treatment
- System navigation services
- Legal services to address barriers to reentry
- Linkages to medical care

"The California Community Reinvestment Grants program continues to serve as a valuable resource for communities that have faced longstanding barriers to opportunity," said Dee Dee Myers, Senior Advisor to Governor Newsom and Director of GO-Biz. "This latest round of awards will support the economic health and well-being of neighborhoods across the state that need and deserve this critical level of reinvestment."

Past federal and state drug policies led to the mass incarceration of people of color, decreased access to social services, loss of educational attainment due to diminished federal financial aid eligibility, prohibitions on the use of public housing and other public assistance, and the separation of families. The CalCRG program aims to advance health, wellness and economic justice for these populations and communities. Learn more about the CalCRG program at this link https://business.ca.gov/CalCRG

6 Ways to Use Data to Optimize the Worksite

[Article originally appeared in www.forconstructionpros.com]

By John Mongan

People, equipment and materials are the most valuable resources on any worksite, but in today's construction landscape, a fourth asset is playing an increasingly important role on larger sites: data. The data generated by a connected worksite creates a surprising number of opportunities to increase safety, efficiency and productivity.

Contractors who effectively leverage data generated by telematics devices and other digital technologies stand to improve their business and pocket bigger profits. The following are six of the most impactful ways to use data to optimize the worksite and increase project success.

1. Locate Equipment in Real Time

Making the most of every piece of equipment contributes to a healthier bottom line. Yet too often, equipment "disappears" on the jobsite, leading to downtime as crews and managers stop to search for it. Workers may inadvertently leave machines in the wrong place or intentionally hoard in-demand equipment.

Lack of visibility into the location of heavy equipment as well as machines such as air compressors and generators can drive project managers to acquire more units than necessary, resulting in overspending. Telematics devices equipped with GPS sensors bring assets out of hiding. With the help of a cloud-based fleet management system and related mobile app, project managers can use their computer or mobile device to pull up a map of the site and pinpoint the location of every telematics-enabled asset. Some systems offer breadcrumb maps that show how the equipment got to its current location.

A good fleet management system also allows contractors to configure geofences and receive alerts when a piece of equipment exits its virtual boundary.

2. Right-Size Fleets Based on Utilization

The more heavily equipment is used, the less it costs per hour of use and the greater the ROI. Optimizing equipment utilization begins with measuring it — something many companies don't currently do. Telematics data makes it simple.

Telematics devices provide usage data that is sent to a fleet management platform. In that platform, users can easily generate utilization reports that highlight under-utilized and overutilized equipment by equipment category and even by specific unit.

Using this data, project managers can right-size their project fleets. They can return rental equipment that's sitting idle or move under-utilized owned equipment to another worksite. Lowutilization alerts, available with some platforms, help managers act faster.

Equipment that's over-utilized poses a different problem: Crews may not have the machine they need when they need it. To maintain productivity, contractors can choose to supplement heavily utilized equipment by renting or purchasing additional units.

Measuring utilization has another benefit. Utilization data from past projects helps contractors better predict equipment needs on future projects and create more accurate budgets and bids.

3. Track Tools With Innovative Technology Solutions

On large projects, tool loss is often rampant. Rather than accept the high cost of tool replacement, contractors can choose to track their tools.

A myriad of tool tracking solutions exists to serve the needs of different projects and worksites. Renting tools that come with Bluetooth tags securely affixed is one relatively simple solution. As a tool moves across the jobsite, its location is recorded by telematics devices embedded in equipment or by Bluetooth gateways placed in strategic locations throughout the site. The location data is then sent to a cloud-based fleet management system. This way, the system can reveal the location of each tool. To create accountability for tools, contractors can check out each tagged tool to an individual. However, manning a tool room ties up personnel. Contractors can offload the burden to a temporary equipment vendor that offers a managed tool trailer. Some vendors will custom stock the trailer according to the craft curve so that contractors pay for only the tools they need at each stage of the project.

Recently, at least one self-serve rental tool management solution has entered the market in the form of a smart, accessed-managed, customstocked Probox.

When workers are held accountable for the tools they use, they are more likely to return them and less likely to leave them lying around, lend them out or take them home.

4. Perform Just-in-Time Maintenance

Projects go smoother and crews work safer when equipment is properly maintained. With odometer and engine hour data provided by telematics devices, maintenance managers can practice just-in-time preventative maintenance instead of traditional calendar-based maintenance.

Maintenance based on manufacturer-recommended calendar intervals can result in underservicing heavily used equipment, which can lead to breakdowns and higher repair costs.

ate project delivery, lower long-term costs, and increase flexibility. It will also help mitigate escalation risk, which has been one of the largest drivers of increase project costs.

Since joining the Authority in the Fall of 2024, CEO Ian Choudri set clear and urgent goals for the program:

- 1. Right-size the project and build in the correct sequence – finding cost savings in a measured, responsible manner while staying laser-focused on starting track installation, testing, and operations within the initial 119 miles, and expanding service from there.
- Build faster, smarter, and more economically by rethinking how we plan and execute construction.

- Cut red tape and streamline operations removing unnecessary processes and organizational redundancies that slow progress.
- Implement a new vision focused on connecting major population centers sooner creating the conditions necessary to attract private investment into the program.

- 5. Stabilize state funding and financing mechanisms working closely with the Legislature to enact the state's funding commitment.

The Authority is preparing to release a Request for Expression of Interest (RFEI) in the coming weeks to begin the process of formal industry consultation for potential public private partnerships to drive creative solu

About the San Francisco African American Chamber of Commerce (SFAACC)

The San Francisco African American Chamber of Commerce (SFAACC) is committed to advancing economic development and empowerment for African-American-owned businesses throughout San Francisco. SFAACC has been a vital advocate and resource hub for over five decades, promoting entrepreneurship, strategic partnerships, and equity-driven policy to ensure access to capital, opportunity, and sustainable success for Black businesses and professionals.

Introducing Brigette Renee LeBlanc, MTA: Trailblazer, Community Advocate, and President and CEO elect of the San Francisco African American Chamber of Commerce

Brigette Renee LeBlanc, MTA, an accomplished global event and meeting specialist, has made history as the first woman to serve as President and CEO elect formally the Vice Chair of the Board for The San Francisco African American Chamber of Commerce (SFAACC). With her sights set on the presidency of this esteemed organization, Brigette is leveraging her unmatched expertise and decades of advocacy to create meaningful change and amplify the voices of Black entrepreneurs in the San Francisco Bay Area and beyond.

A proud San Francisco native, Brigette's roots trace back to the vibrant Bayview Hunters Point District. Her educational journey through San Francisco's public schools-including graduating from Lowell High School-and her advanced degrees in Mass Communications from Cal State Havward and a Master's in Tourism Administration from Geroge Washington University have laid the groundwork for her remarkable 30-year career as an entrepreneur, former San Francisco Commissioner, and Community Advocate.

Brigette's influence spans multiple spheres:

Business Leadership: As the first Black woman to serve as Event Manager at San Francisco City Hall, Brigette has demonstrated unparalleled leadership in curating impactful events and fostering community connections.

- Community Advocacy: From her tenure as a Commissioner for the Southeast Community Facility to her instrumental roles in helping Gavin Newsom become Mayor is the first election as the District 5 liaison with that district having the second highest voter turnout. Brigette's commitment to empowering underserved communities is unwavering.
- Breaking Barriers: Brigette continues to shatter glass ceilings, LeBlanc served as the First women Vice Chair of the SFAACC Board, sat on the George Davis Senior Board, and was former SF President of Black Women Organized for Political (BWOPA). Currently, LeBlanc sits on the State Board. LeBlanc is also a proud alumnus of EmergeCA class of 2007 and Leadership San Francisco.
