

Veterans Strengthen the Construction Industry Amid Skilled Worker Shortages

By Bryce Barnes

In a world built on progress, few industries rise and fall with changing times as much as the construction industry. This field never stands still, as skilled workers shape skylines and neighborhoods, laying the backbone of our cities. As demand grows and skilled hands become harder to find, the answer stands in plain sight: veterans. They are not just ready to serve; they are prepared to build.

Ask anyone who has led a job site or managed a high-stakes project: discipline, teamwork and grit are qualities that set top performers apart. These are the skills found in veterans. According to a report from the United States Department of Labor, approximately 200,000 service members move from a life in uniform to civilian work each year.

Veterans bring much more than discipline or technical know-how. They fit jobs where leadership, clear thinking and problem-solving matter most. Military life hones these skills daily. Veterans motivate teams, adapt to fast change and see a mission through. Jumping hurdles? Staying sharp under pressure? Veterans do this on the hardest days, striving to lift others alongside them.

The numbers tell a clear story. More than 528,000 veterans work in construction today, according to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics. They shape roads, schools and bridges. From the subcontractors to construction managers, veterans play an important role in all facets of construction. They find meaning in the work and a sense of teamwork that echoes their service. As a graduate from West Point and a former platoon leader, I've experienced it firsthand.

From day 1, construction felt like a line platoon. There was a clear chain of command, a schedule and a mission to accomplish. I recognized the similarities between a platoon sergeant and a superintendent, and between a project manager and a platoon leader. In the military, we briefed our soldiers; in construction we brief our subcontractors. Many of my West Point classmates mention the difficulty of transitioning to civilian life because of the lack of camaraderie and the

Administrator Loeffler Applauds House Passage of “Made in America Manufacturing Finance Act”

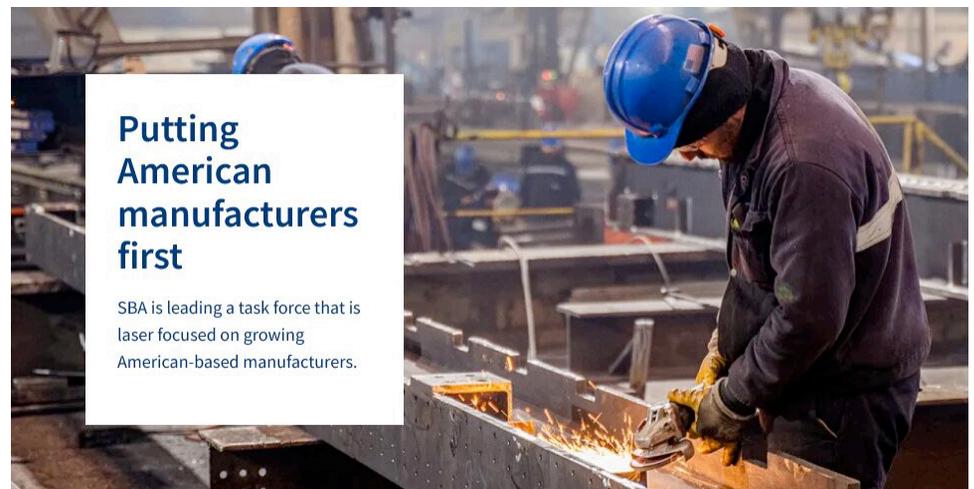

[Article originally appeared in www.sba.gov]

Kelly Loeffler, Administrator of the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) applauded the U.S. House of Representatives' bipartisan and unanimous passage of H.R. 3174, the Made in America Manufacturing Finance Act, which will double the SBA's loan limit from $5 million to $10 million for small manufacturers. The legislation was sponsored by Congressman Roger Williams (R-TX), Chairman of the House Committee on Small Business.

“President Trump has built a strong foundation for the comeback of American industry by delivering historic tax cuts, deregulation, fair trade, and nearly $20 trillion in investment to support Made in America,” said Administrator Loeffler. “Today, U.S. manufacturers – of which 98% are small businesses – require more capital to meet rising demand in an economy that is now being built by Americans, for Americans. With the bipartisan House passage of the Made in America Manufacturing Finance Act, manufacturers are one step closer to unlocking the capital they need to bring home American jobs and industry. The SBA is grateful to Chairman Williams for sponsoring this legislation and looks forward to its favorable consideration as it advances to the Senate.”

Putting American manufacturers first

SBA is leading a task force that is laser focused on growing American-based manufacturers.

“I want to thank Administrator Loeffler and my colleagues in the House and Senate for their collaboration on this critical legislation supporting America's small manufacturers,” said Chairman Williams. “The Made in America Manufacturing Finance Act strengthens the ability of small manufacturers to invest, scale, and compete. These entrepreneurs are the backbone of our industrial base, and their success fuels our nation. With this legislation, we continue to advance an America First agenda that ensures Main Street remains the driving force in American innovation.”

H.R. 3174 aligns with the SBA's Made in America Manufacturing Initiative, a broad effort launched by the agency earlier this year to rebuild industrial dominance by cutting regulations, expanding access to capital, highlighting the existing manufacturing base, and advancing

CITIES ON THE MOVE

“Oakland is On the Move”: Mayor Lee and City Leaders Announce Major $334 Million Bond Sale

[Article originally appeared in www.oaklandca.gov]

The City of Oakland successfully priced a total of $334 million of General Obligation bonds on December 4, 2025. This milestone provides access to capital funding that will be used by City departments to deliver paved roads, restored public facilities, and investments in affordable housing.

“Oakland is on the move and building momentum with this bond sale. We are reviving access to funding for paving our streets, restoring public facilities we all use and depend upon, and investing in affordable housing for our community, all while maintaining transparency and fiscal discipline,” Mayor Barbara Lee said. “These bonds represent our City’s continued commitment to sound financial management and responsible investment in Oakland’s future. Together, we are strengthening our foundation for generations to come. I’m grateful to our partners in the City Council for their leadership and support, and to City Administrator Jestin Johnson for driving this process and ensuring we brought it home.”

$285 million of the bonds support new projects and $49 million of the bonds refund existing bonds for debt service savings. The City’s bond offering was well received with strong investor demand. Investors placed $638 million in orders for the $334 million of bonds offered by the City. There was broad investor demand with 26 separate investment firms placing orders. The oversubscription ultimately allowed the City to lower the final interest rates offered to investors and reduce the City’s borrowing cost.

There was both a tax-exempt portion and a taxable portion for the bond offering, reflecting the various uses of the bond proceeds. The $143.5 million of tax-exempt bonds have a 30-year final maturity and received an all-in borrowing cost of 3.99%. The $191 million of taxable bonds have a 24-year final maturity and received an all-in borrowing cost of 5.55%. The $49 million in tax-exempt bonds that refinance existing obligations of the City resulted in $5.6 million of debt service savings for taxpayers through 2039, or $4.7 million on a present value basis.

The new money bonds will fund affordable housing, roadway safety and infrastructure improvements, and renovations to parks, libraries, senior centers, and other public facilities under the City’s Measure U Authorization. In September, the City Council approved the sale of these bonds along with a list of projects and programs that will receive the funds. The full list is available online (Resolution 90850 C.M.S.) – highlights include:

- $50.5 million for Citywide Street Resurfacing
- $13 million for the Complete Streets Capital Program
- $9.5 million for the Curb Ramps Program
- $30 million for the Acquisition and Preservation of Existing Affordable Housing
- $33 million for the Mandela Transit Oriented Development
- $28 million for the Liberation Park Development
- $3 million for the Brookdale Recreation Center capital project

- $1.5 million for the Oakland Tool Lending Library at the Temescal Branch Library
- $10 million for the Oakland Ice Center

“We deeply appreciate the work of our finance team and underwriting partners who help position Oakland as a trustworthy investment and vibrant, resilient City,” City Administrator Jestin Johnson said. “An incredible team of City professionals and partner firms went above and beyond to make this happen, and I want to recognize them by name for their invaluable contributions.” They include:

- Finance: Bradley Johnson, Dawn Hort, Jan Mazyck, David Jones, Greg Danielian, Pooja Shrestha, Nicole Welch
- City Administrator’s Office: Deborah Edgerly, Monica Davis
- City Attorney’s Office: Amber Macaulay, Malia McPherson

City Administrator Johnson also thanked PFM Financial Advisors LLC serving as municipal advisor, and the Oakland-based firm Siebert Williams Shank & Co., LLC serving as the Senior Manager along with Loop Capital Markets, LLC and BofA Securities, Inc. as co-managers for their remarkable support and professional services that enabled the sale.

What’s Next:

Pricing marks the point at which the City and investors locked in the final dollar amounts, interest rates, and other key terms of the bond sale. This stage is commonly referred to as the sale date. At pricing, no funds are exchanged. The actual delivery of bonds and receipt of monies occurs at closing, which is scheduled within the next two weeks.

Capital projects receiving this funding will proceed on individual timelines based on their individual conditions and needs. At the time of closing, funding will be immediately available to those projects.

struggle of being in an office all day. Construction is as close as you can come to matching the intensity of the military.

These strengths benefit not only veterans but also our industry as a whole. The construction trades face a deep worker gap. Reports from Arcoro indicate that 94% of firms struggle to find skilled workers, while more than a million roles are expected to remain unfilled in the years ahead. Veterans, with heads for safety and a mission-first mindset can help fill this gap fast. Industry credentials, such as those from the Hard Hat Heroes program, facilitate a smoother transition from active duty to the job site by matching military skills to construction needs. Veterans show up on time, accomplish the mission and stick with it. Their track record of loyalty, reliability and pride in their unit matches the values that many companies strive to instill. Firms that prioritize transparent communication, lifelong learning and teamwork already seek these same core traits these vets bring to the table.

If the next 100 years of construction resemble the last, diverse teams that value what veterans bring will write the next proud chapter.

For the construction industry's future, the way forward seems simple. Recruit veterans. Train, mentor and keep them. Let their stories and skills lift your projects and teams. Veterans are built for challenge. Now, let them help build what comes next.
