

20 Things You Can Sell Online that You Might Not Have Thought Of

By Anita Campbell,

You already know that you can build a business selling collectibles on eBay or ebooks on Amazon, but those are just a couple of the options out there for selling products and services online. From virtual services to physical products that use your own unique designs, check out these suggestions for things to sell online that you may not have considered before.

Website Domain

When you purchase the domain for a website, you own it. That means you also have the right to sell it. Whether you've purchased a domain that you no longer use or want to build a business around this type of product, you can display a message on your home page listing the domain for sale and then use marketplaces like Flippa or Sedo to find potential buyers.

Website Templates

To help people create beautiful websites, anyone with some coding or programming knowledge can create customizable templates for WordPress or Squarespace and then offer them for sale. You can sell them on dedicated marketplaces like WP Shop or Etsy.

Apps

For those who can develop desktop or mobile apps, you can sell those in the Apple Store, Google Play, or specific platform marketplaces like Salesforce or Shopify.

Images

Photographers, turn your photos into passive income by making them available on sites like Shutterstock or 500px, where bloggers or online businesses can purchase your images for a small fee.

Music

People who create video or audio content could often use some music or sound effects to enhance their own content. So musicians or sound effect artists can sell the rights to songs or similar content on sites like Royalty Exchange or Audio-Jungle.

Video Content

Similarly, companies may need video footage for presentations or to enhance their own video marketing. Some stock photo sites like Shutterstock also offer a marketplace for video content, and there are also video-specific sites like VideoHive and Motion Array.

Courses

If you have expertise in a specific area, you can essentially sell your knowledge to others by creating a course using sites like Udemy or SkillShare. Teach anything from cross stitching to setting up a new computer.

Printable Workbooks

Another way to share your expertise is to create printable workbooks by designing downloadable PDF files. Then you can upload them to your own ecommerce site and deliver them to your customers via email or direct download on the sales page. You can also use marketplaces like PayLoads and SendOwl to sell digital downloads.

Consultations

If you prefer a more one-on-one approach, you can offer in-person or virtual consultations with clients on a variety of subjects. Use a scheduling tool like Acuity or Calendly so customers can book blocks of time with you. Then use that time to help them design their home, provide business advice, or provide whatever type of guidance falls within your niche.

Meal or Workout Plans

Especially when it comes to health and wellness, people can often use a general guide to help them create their own positive habits. If you have experience as a personal trainer or nutritionist, you could create customized meal or workout plans for people looking to make those changes. Real Plans and Trainerize are two sites that allow you to sell customized meal plans.

Access to Events

People are always looking to attend special events. Sell tickets to concerts or other in-person events on marketplaces like StubHub Vivd Seating, or sell access to your own virtual webinars or events using a virtual platform like AnyMeeting or Skype.

Tips for Keeping the Project on Schedule

Article was originally posted on [www.acuity.com]

By John Lack,

There is a lot going on once a construction project starts, and that continues into the planning, construction, and punch-list phase. I believe one of the key elements that determines if the job will run smoothly and be completed on time is the project schedule. The project schedule charts the course and lays out the timeline for the completion of the project.

With so many companies and individuals involved, it is critical everyone understands, approves, and follows the project schedule. Listed below are four suggestions regarding project scheduling.

1. A realistic schedule is critical. Each task must be allotted enough time for the contractor/subcontractor to be able to staff the job adequately and complete the job correctly and safely. The person putting the schedule together must be familiar with the process and sequence of the project.
2. Before awarding the job, make sure the schedule is part of the contract documents. A time frame with the scope of work, including an estimated start and completion date, should be agreed upon by both parties and included in the contract. A well-seasoned construction attorney can help draft contracts that include contract definitions, progress and completion details, progress payments, as well as delays and extensions of time.
3. The more organized you are before the job starts, the better the job goes. A good project manager will focus on the daily task while also thinking three to four steps ahead. It is important to foresee potential delays and to pin down delivery dates. If you are using purchase orders, make sure you attach terms and conditions regarding delivery delays. Keep in mind, it is easier to pick up time in the beginning of the project than at the end in most cases.

4. Post the timeline for all to see. In my experience, having a schedule in large calendar form posted on the job site is highly effective. I would use a few sheets of unwanted plans (24" x 36") to make the timeline. On the back of each sheet, draw a grid with 5" x 5" squares and then use colored markers to write the schedule. The colored markers are important as they draw people to look at the schedule board. You might use red for inspections, blue for deliveries, green when a subcontractor is starting, etc. Encourage everyone to view the calendar daily for updates or adjustments. This will impress anyone who visits the job site, including the owner. With all the technology we have today, sometimes it's still the simple things that can have the most impact. I believe this is one of them.

Unforeseen conditions such as weather can be a factor in scheduling. However, having a good team of contractors and subcontractors can sometimes help offset lost time. Keeping the owner aware of the job schedule throughout the project is critical. I have made it a practice not to commit to a completion date until I'm sure weather is not going to delay the job—especially if the owner is doing an early advertising campaign for a grand opening.

20 Things You Can Sell Online that You Might Not Have Thought Of

Memberships

If you create a part of your website that's extra valuable, you can sell access to it on a membership basis. Podia and Memberful are a few options for selling memberships to customers.

T-Shirt Designs

You don't need to physically sell t-shirts in order to make money. You can create designs and upload them to sites like Redbubble or Merch and they'll create the actual products.

Printable Artwork

Another option for artists or designers: turn your artwork into downloadable PDF files and then list it for sale, either on your own site or marketplaces like Zazzle or Society6.

Access to Your Influence or Audience

If you've worked hard to cultivate a dedicated audience on your blog or social media channels, you can sell that influence to brands via influencer marketing campaigns. Intellifluence and Pepperjam are some platforms that allow you to market that opportunity to relevant brands.

Professional Services

If you're a writer, editor, virtual assistant, graphic designer or any other type of online service provider, use platforms like Fiverr or Upwork to list your services and sell them online to other businesses on a freelance basis.

Templates

To help others on a more product based level, sell templates for blog posts, speeches or even website disclaimers. Offer them as printables or downloadable PDFs. Theme Forest and Template Cloud both offer a number of options for offering these types of products.

Research Reports

For those who are able to perform professional research, compile your findings into a report and then offer it as a downloadable ebook or guide. You can also gain visibility for your reports on sites like RnR Market Research or Savio.

Photo Filters

For those with photo editing experience, you can create Photoshop or Lightroom actions and then offer them for sale on FilterGrade or Etsy.

Graphic Elements

Similarly, you can sell stickers, fonts or other graphics that people can use in their own marketing or branding materials. Sites like Graphic River and Creative Market can help you get your graphics in front of potential customers.
