

Working With Women & Minority Business Enterprises in Construction

[Article was originally posted on www.constructconnect.com]

By Kendall Jones,

So, you're a general contractor bidding a project and the contract requires an MBE participation goal of 8% and you aren't sure where to turn. Maybe you're a minority or woman owned company working in the realm of the construction industry and want to find more work. Today we're going to look at some of the various programs available for contractors, subcontractors and construction suppliers that are women and minority-owned business enterprises. We'll discuss programs from the federal level all the way down to local municipalities.

The US Department of Transportation (USDOT) has established a Disadvantaged Business Enterprise (DBE) Program that was created by the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, Efficient Transportation Act: A Legacy for Users. The program was established to provide opportunities and increase participation for state and local transportation agencies that receive financial assistance from the USDOT which includes the Federal Highway Administration, Federal Aviation Administration and the Federal Transit Administration.

Each agency receiving federal funds for projects are required to set annual DBE participation goals as well as contract-specific DBE subcontracting goals. To fulfill those goals, the DBE subcontractor must provide a commercially useful function. In instances where the participation goal is not met, the prime contractor must prove that they made Good Faith Efforts to meet the goal.

A DBE is classified as a for-profit small business, as defined by the US Small Business Administration, that is at least 51% owned by one or more individuals who are both socially and economically disadvantaged or if it's a corporation, then 51% of stock is owned by one or more such individuals and whose management and daily business operations are controlled by those individuals.

Another item that factors into DBE certification includes the personal net worth of the owner(s) excluding their ownership interest of the business and interest in their primary residence. Minority Business Enterprises (MBE) and Women Business Enterprises (WBE) both fall into this category with an MBE being at least 51% owned and controlled by a minority group and a WBE being at least 51% owned and controlled by women. Net worth limits can vary greatly from agency to agency.

The USDOT also requires that all agencies in a state receiving federal funds must create and maintain a Unified Certification Program (UCP) with mandatory reciprocity throughout all agencies in the given state. The UCP will be responsible for certifying companies and maintaining a DBE directory that will be publicly available electronically, on the internet as well as in print.

The USDOT is not the only federal agency that requires MBE participation. The Small Business

Act requires that all contracts solicited that may result in an award over $1 million for construction and $500,000 for any other contract, the prime contractor must submit a subcontracting plan detailing how they will use MBEs on the project.

Now let's look at a small sample of programs available on the state and local levels. These programs are generally designed to increase the use of MBEs by providing training and networking opportunities, helping agencies identify MBEs that provide services and supplies they procure and in some instances setting participation goals on contracts. They also are responsible for certifying companies and maintaining directories.

The Maryland General Assembly enacted legislation in 1978 to create an MBE program. Currently, it requires state agencies to make every effort to achieve an overall goal of 29% MBE participation on the total dollar amount of all procurement contracts and is overseen by the Office of Minority Affairs.

In North Carolina, the program is overseen by the Office for Historically Underutilized Businesses. The state has verifiable goals of 10% on construction projects and requires local agencies to set goals on projects receiving state funds.

Massachusetts has a similar policy to North Carolina. They have a 10.4% combined M/WBE participation goal for construction contracts and a 17.9% combined goal on design contracts. Massachusetts also requires that local agencies requiring state funds for projects set goals for construction projects.

Does Your Small Business Qualify?

By Ijeoma S. Nwatu,

Small businesses do big business with the federal government. Think about the possibilities of generating sales and revenue with the government. Remember, the U.S. government is the world's largest customer and it by law, is required to purchase items from small businesses. The Small Business Administration plays a major role in supporting businesses that want to work with the government. Learn whether or not your business qualifies and how to access these resources.

When working with the Small Business Administration, size matters! The size of your small business may seem relative but when working with the SBA there are standards to meet. A small business is defined 'either in terms of the average number of employees over the past 12 months, or average annual receipts over the past three years.' Also, all federal agencies use SBA's size standards, and therefore it's important to determine your NACIS code.

In addition, SBA defines a U.S. small business concern as:

- Organized for profit

- Has a place of business in the U.S
- Operates primarily within the U.S. or makes a significant contribution to the U.S. economy through payment of taxes or use of American products, materials or labor
- Is independently owned and operated
- Is not dominant in its field on a national basis

The business may be a sole proprietorship, partnership, corporation, or any other legal form. In determining what constitutes a small business, the definition will vary to reflect industry differences, such as size standards.

The Small Business Administration's Office of Government Contracting & Business Development works with several federal agencies to award twenty three percent of all prime government contract dollars to small businesses. This requirement helps ensure federal agencies meet specific statutory goals for groups including:

- Women-Owned Small Business
- Service-Disabled Veteran-Owned Small Business (SDVOSB)

- Historically Underutilized Business Zones (HUBZone)

Additionally, SBA's 8(a) Business Development Program supports eligible socially and economically disadvantaged individuals in building and growing their businesses through counseling, workshops, and matchmaking opportunities with federal buyers.

Prior to bidding, your small business will need a D-U-N-S Number, a unique nine-digit ID number for the physical address of your business. It's free and required.

The Small Business Administration has a full, detailed list of prerequisites before you embark of registering your small business for contracting. Learn more about government contracting and how to qualify through the Small Business Administration or find the latest information via Twitter.

Women & Minority Business Enterprises in Construction

In New Jersey, the Division of Minority and Women Business Development has recently merged with Department of Treasury and while they don't have specific MBE participation goals they do have a small business set-aside program with a goal of awarding 25% of contracting dollars to small businesses.

Virginia has a 42% goal for participation through their Small, Women-owned, Minority-owned Businesses Program (SWaM). Some agencies within the state do have separate MBE and WBE participation goals.

Some states have MBE offices to promote and increase the participation but don't have any statewide MBE or WBE goals for construction procurement.

In New York, the Division of Minority and Women-Owned Business Development's mission is to "promote equality of economic opportunities for MWBEs and to eliminate barriers to their participation in state contracts."

The Florida Office of Supplier Diversity has advocacy and outreach initiatives like their Match-Maker Conferences to connect MBE's with state agency purchasing specialists. Consequently, while the state government doesn't have participation goals for contracts, cities like Orlando have goals of 18% for MBEs and 6% for WBEs and the City of Tallahassee has goals based on the types of services being solicited. They also offer a Mentor-Protégé Program to support women, veteran and minority small businesses.

Not all states have an agency or department dedicated to promoting MBEs. The District of Columbia doesn't have anything dedicated solely to minority businesses but they do have a Department of Small and Local Business Development that requires an overall participation goal of 50% by local Small Business Enterprises which covers MBEs and WBEs.

If you are a general contractor you should make sure you understand the rules and regulations regarding MBE participation for the Federal, state or local agency you are submitting bids to, including those on commercially useful functions and Good Faith Efforts. These agencies are also a great source for locating MBE contractors as they are required to keep directories on certified subcontractors.

Other ways to locate MBE subcontractors is to publish advertisements in ethnic and minority publications and with your local minority contractors' associations. Consider attending outreach programs sponsored by state and local MBE Program offices or local contractors' associations.

If you are an MBE contractor and are looking for ways to grow your business, you should ensure your company is certified with your state and local agencies as well as any states where your company is licensed to do work. In addition to certification, these agencies can also assist in training, networking and compliance.

Another excellent source for finding subcontracting opportunities for your MBE are contractors' associations like the National Association of Minority Contractors, National Hispanic Construction Association, National Black Contractors Association, and the National Association of Women in Construction. These organizations have local chapters that are familiar with the construction industry in your area and prove a valuable resource for your company.
