

SBE NEWS ALERT

New Congress Brings New Leadership to Small Business Committees

By Erik Gulbrandsen

The 114th Congress brought to Washington 71 new lawmakers, a Republican-led Senate and new leadership for both the House and the Senate Small Business Committees. The new chairs and ranking members of the Senate and House committees have each displayed their respect for small business, and below is a glance at what issues small business stakeholders can expect them to be interested in.

Hailing from Louisiana, Republican Senator David Vitter is currently in his 15th year in Congress and 10th year in the Senate as he takes his place as the new chairman of the Senate Small Business and Entrepreneurship Committee. Vitter has proven himself to be a strong advocate on behalf of small business. His efforts have focused on working to ensure that small businesses have access to capital and job training programs. Furthermore, he has consistently shown how federal rules need to be simplified and tailored neatly to ensure that small businesses can comply with regulations while facing the least economic burden possible. Beginning his career in 1987 as a Representative for Maryland's 3rd District, Senator Ben Cardin, a Democrat, was elected to the Senate in 2007 and is currently serving his second term. The junior senator from Maryland will be the ranking member on the committee. Cardin has worked hard to enable small businesses to get the help they need from the federal government. He has made strengthening the minority small business community a top priority and will look to develop policies that encourage small business success.

Representing the 1st District of Ohio, House Small Business Committee Chairman Congressman Steve Chabot, a Republican, has served in the House for a total of 18 years and his focus has been on small business growth and job creation. Stakeholders can expect him to work to lessen the burdens of regulations, taxes and barriers to accessing capital as well.

Democratic Congresswoman Nydia Velazquez, representing New York's 7th District, is no stranger to the House Small Business Committee, having served on the committee since 1998. She has consistently praised the small business community and their contribution to the United States economy. She has also worked to expand opportunities for women and minority business owners. Small business owners can expect her to advocate for policies that lower regulatory and tax compliance cost to small business.

In the 114th Congress, Republicans will surely advocate for measures that limit the size and scope of government, and regulatory reform bills will most likely be on the agenda. However, even with a different legislative landscape, small business has proven to be the driving force behind the economic recovery and both the Senate and House committees will want to continue to support that success.
