Save Brooklyn Black History at Weeksville We also preserve and maintain our Historic By Weeksville Heritage Center Hunterfly Road Houses, landmarked buildings from the mid-nineteenth and early twentieth

Editor's note: Weeksville Heritage Center in Crown Heights preserves a vital part of Brooklyn's black history. The organization has an urgent need for more funding by the end of June and into the future. The following information is provided on their GoFundMe site at https://www.crowdrise. com/o/en/campaign/save-weeksville2019 Weeksville Heritage Center needs you, and we need you now.

We are a unique historic house museum located in Crown Heights and our work preserves the history of one of the largest free black communities in pre-Civil War America. For fifty years, we've used arts, culture, education, and historic preservation to make this history relevant and resonant for contemporary audiences. But all of this work is in jeopardy. We'll be forced to shut Weeksville's doors by July if we are not able to close a budget gap.

Where does our money go? We oversee a 23,000-square-foot Visitor and Education Center.

centuries that are each over one hundred years old. Maintenance on all of these structures is expensive, and while costs are rising, our traditional funding sources have not kept pace. Overall, it's an extremely difficult funding environment for black cultural institutions. As those who love Weeksville know, the loss to central Brooklyn—and to New York City—would be devastating. We're asking for your help to protect and preserve the houses and the dreams of our founding executive director, Dr. Joan Maynard, and all the working people who came together to save the evidence of historic Weeksville in the 1960s. Also, it's to ensure that we don't lose: · Our ability to inspire over six thousand NYC schoolchildren who tour our grounds annually • The means to preserve and make available collections that document and interpret
